CHAPTER 2

PARTICULARS OF ORGANISATION, FUNCTIONS AND DUTIES

2.1. Objective/purpose of the public authority

The Primary objective / purpose of South Western Air Command is to provide Air Defence of the South Western Region of India comprising the states of Gujarat, Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh and Maharashtra. South Western Air Command is also responsible for the conduct of all Air operations in this region. The secondary purpose is to assist Civil Authorities during natural calamities and internal disturbances.

2.2. Mission/Vision Statement of the public authority

Same as 2.1. above

2.3. Brief history of the public authority and context of its formation

South Western Air Command (erstwhile No 1 Operational Group) is one of the five operational Commands of the Indian Air Force. No 1 Operational Group was formed on 21 Sep 72 and was later redesignated as South Western Air Command on 23 Jul 80. The area of South Western Air Command was carved out of Western Air Command, which included most of Rajasthan, southward through Gujarat to Saurashtra and the Kutch Area. In mid 85, in a major expansion of area of responsibility of South Western Air Command, the units located at Pune and Bombay were transferred from Central Air Command to South Western Air Command. Thus the entire South Western area of the country including Goa came under this Air Command. This Command covers about 1450 kms of land border and 2400 km of coast line.

In the formative years of the Indian Air Force, the command and control of the Air Force in the Border States of Rajasthan and Gujarat presented a problem for effective direction of the air operation. They fell within the area of responsibility of the Western Air Command, but directions to the Army Units emanated from the Southern Army Command at Pune, Southern Command being responsible for their defence plans on ground. Thus, the Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Western Air Command had to deal with two Army commanders. Western Command for the states of Kashmir and Punjab and Southern Command for Rajasthan and Gujarat States. Since the area of prime importance in any war was likely to be that of the Western Command, it was natural for the Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief Western Air Command to devote most of his attention to that part of the border with a Deputy looking after Rajasthan and Gujarat. An AOC Rajasthan was, therefore, appointed with his Headquarters at Jaipur alongside the Advance Headquarters of the Southern Army Command. He was made responsible for both Air Defence and joint operations with the Army. In this manner, while Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief Western Air Command held overall charge of the entire Western border, detailed control of operational activity in Rajasthan and Gujarat Sectors was delegated to an AOC subordinate to him.

In 1969, there was reorganization in the higher command and control. The entire border was divided into three parts for the purpose of operational control and an operational Air Command was put in charge of each area. Thus the Air Force had three operational Air Commands - the Western, the Central and the Eastern Air Command. In addition, an independent operational group was formed at Jaipur for the control of South Western sector which was to work in conjunction with the Southern Command of the Army. On 21 Sep 72, No. 1 Operational Group was formed at Jodhpur and on 23 Jul 80, it was redesignated as South Western Air Command.

2.4. Duties of the public authority:

HQ South Western Air Command has four Principal Staff Officers assisting the Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief in various functions. Duties of their branches are attached as Appendix 'B'

2.5. Main functions of the public authority

(a) The main function of South Western Air Command is to ensure Air Defence of the South Western Region of India comprising the states of Gujarat, Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh and Maharashtra. South Western Air Command is also responsible for the conduct of Air Operations in this region. The secondary purpose is to assist civil authorities during natural calamities and internal disturbances.

(b) To achieve this objective, HQ South Western Air Command formulates, issues and reviews policies on various matters pertaining to the functioning of the Command and exercises command and control through Commanders of the Stations/units under South Western Air Command.

(c) HQ South Western Air Command also interacts and maintains liaison with the Army & the Navy.
