NEW DELHI: The Round the world expedition is resting in Anchorage in Alaska for a day and is expected to head out on Sunday.

The pilots are utilising the time to service the aircraft and have rented a hangar at the airport.

Earlier on Saturday, the two pilots had reached Anchorage after a brief fuel stop at McGrath.

The expedition aims to create a new world record of circumnavigating the world in single motor small aircraft in 64 days. However, the plans went a bit awry due to bad weather conditions in both China and Russia.
